CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AT STURGIS

The accompanying illustration is that of the New Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Sturgis, Ky. The readers of the Record-Press will remember that a division arose in the Cumberland church in reference to merging that church into the Presbyterian church U. S. A., generally the unfortunate affair, and we understand there are now pending thirty-one law-suits in the lower courts besides those in the Supreme Courts. Georgia, Texas and California Supreme courts gave decisions in favor of those who had gone into the Merger, and in those States the Cumberlands lost the church property. Tennessee, Indiana and Missouri Supreme Courts declared the Merger illegal and unconstitutional, and therefore gave all the property to the Cumberlands.

In Kentucky there has been but one lawsuit, we understand, that of property to those who went into the U. S. A., church. Hence the Kentucky decision only decided the one piece of property (Sturgis) in the State of Kentucky

In an interview Rev. Q. A. Barbee, pastor of the Sturgis Cumberlands, and who is now holding a meeting here, we learn that some of the eldest talent in the State have been retained, and in the near future action will be taken to regain possession of their property now held by the U. S. A.'s, in this part of the State.

When the Court of Appeals deci-

the men and women forming the Cumberland church in Sturgis, of whom there is none better. Messrs G. B. Simpson, jr., J. V. Simpson, E. B. Jones, A. L. Hoerth, C. S. Welch, John Hughes, Hon. Geo. S. Wilson, Eugene Whitecotton and William Wilson are the official board of the church, and these names in Union county are the synonyms for honesty and integrity. They are among the best of the business men in the good and wealthy county of Union

It would be unpardonable if we failed to mention the good work of the Ladies Aid Society, whose membership are personal friends of the editor's family. Mrs. G. B. Simpson, jr., is the president; Mrs. E. B. Jones, Vice President; Mrs. Julia Welch, treasurer; Mrs. Fannie Meacham, secretary. This Society paid $200.00 toward the building and (besides the personal contributions of the women) bought a handsome Brussels carpet, installed beautiful electric chandeliers, purchased one hundred new song books, and have ordered a splendid $300.00 pipetone, pipetop organ. Two elderly women of the congregation have nobly stood by the church in work and money. Mrs. Catherine Hughes contributing $500.00 and Mrs. N. E. Jones, $250.00.

The first service in the new church will be the third Sunday in February. The church will be dedicated in April, during the session of the Princeton Presbytery which convenes in Sturgis. Rev. A. C. Biddle, of London, Tenn., will preach the dedicatory sermon, and Rev. J. T. Barbee, of Nashville, Tenn., father of the pastor, will deliver the charge.

The lot, house, opera chairs, etc., cost $6,150, all of which has been subscribed and paid, excepting about $1,000.

first month of the Legislature session. We have enjoyed but two days of good weather in this time, the remainder being soggy. Frankfort legislature weather. Visitors coming in tell us that the sun is shining beyond the hills that shut us out from the beautiful blue grass plains. where they assure us the comet can be seen, while many a Frankfort eye has been strained in an attempt to see even the candid appendage of this visitor of other skies.

But one bill has yet passed both houses. It being a measure to make one of the State prisons a house of reform for all convicts under the age of thirty.

Several bills have passed the Senate. Some relating to prison reform and one to increase the circuit judges salary $1,200 per year and require the governor to appoint special judges from the regular judges. I feel that this bill will have rough sailing in the House. Many of our readers will be anxious no doubt to learn what is doing in the way of school legislation.

We had a bill prepared and introduced by Mr. Holland of Shelby county to repeal the new school law, with the assurance that we would help get it out of the Rules committee for passage. The sentiment of the House is for repeal, and everybody is of the opinion that the measure must be amended. Even the author tells me that it should be trimmed.

We have a shower of bills to reform or change the entire school system again from bottom to top. We have been considering a bill in committee which we think is worse than the present law and more radical. It creates a State Board of Education, which is the embodiment of centralized power. All other school officers will be but figure heads, even the right to examine and issue certificates will be taken from the county Board. The examination papers are to be gone over and certificates issued by this great central Board at Frankfort.

It seems that this great coterie of philanthropists and educational reformers are yet determined to save us from ourselves. They first lost confidence in the honesty and integrity of the country people to elect their own trustees and select their own teacher, now they propose to save the people from the county Boards by taking away their power to certify to the qualification of those who would teach in their counties, while the State Normals are allowed to turn out teachers on short notice, many of whom could not get a certificate from the county Board. We are being rapidly normalized to death from an educational standpoint. Lord save us from these dreamers, many of whom never saw a country school. Not being satisfied with upsetting the common schools they propose to demoralize the county Boards and bring them into submission making them but another set of puppets who must dance when the Big Chief at Frankfort pulls the string. They tell us that superintendents are failing to account for thousands of dollars annually, and they want to put inspectors after them, also examiners to visit the school and many other officials besides the State Board six members strong, to be paid out of the School funds.

From the amount of mischievous bills now threatening our welfare backed up by the most persistent and scheming lobbyists that ever infested a State capital, we feel that our duty is to sleep with one eye open, on the alert to kill bills instead of introducing new ones. So far we have refrained from introducing bills when others have already covered the case with a similar bill, but will stand behind their measure the same as if our own.

Mr. Brooks of Graves has introduced a bill to put blind tigers and boot-leggers in the penitentiary for engaging in their bellish work of poisoning and debauching the youth of our land. He only saved us the trouble of doing so, and has our assurance of assistance to put it "over the plate." It will pass both houses at a 2:40 gait called Northern Presbyterian in the South, to designate it from the Southern Presbyterian church.

Parts of the Cumberland membership were in favor of the merger and part opposed. Many lawsuits in the civil courts have resulted from the church in our town of Sturgis. The lower court awarded the property to the Cumberlands, but the court of Appeals reversed this decision, saying in effect that where there were two organizations, growing out of the Merger, the court would award the

"Yes, sir."
"What's his name?"
"Wheeler Brand."
"When did he resign?"
"Some of the big advertisers forced him to," admitted McHenry calmly.
A look of understanding flitted across Nolan's face. He shifted his glance from McHenry to Dupuy. Then, with a significant smile, he said:
"I see you are still on the job, Ed Dupuy."

"Well, it's business," began the lobbyist defiantly. But Nolan would not listen to him. Thoughts vastly more important than conjecture as to Dupuy's motives now crowded his brain.
"Where is Brand now?" he asked sternly of McHenry.

"I think he is in the local room now, sir," pointing to the door at his left.
The new proprietor strode impulsively to the doorway and called at the top pitch of his powerful voice:
"Wheeler Brand! Wheeler Brand!"

As he had hurried from the managing editor's room after his dismissal from the Advance, Wheeler Brand struggled valiantly against a wave of discouragement that assailed him and for a moment or two threatened to overwhelm him. "Discharged for beating the town on the story of the year," he muttered. "Well, I'll try to get on across the street," he concluded, "across the street" meaning the Guardian, the bitter rival of the Advance. He went to one of the long oak tables in the city room, where he seated himself next to Higgins, the leading police reporter of the paper, and began nervously to finish the story of a new bank merger on which he had been working when summoned by McHenry. When he finished he laid the pages of copy on the city editor's desk. He dragged a chair to a window, sat down and gazed moodily down at the crowds of people hurrying along the street below.

It was not his dismissal from the staff which chiefly concerned him. He was certain of obtaining another position. In fact, his reputation along Newspaper row was such, and he felt justifiable pride at the thought, that he would be at work within twenty minutes after leaving the Advance office if he so desired. But what did occupy his mind to the exclusion of almost everything else was the consideration of what view Judith Bartelmy would take when she heard the news of his dismissal. She had warned him that he was sacrificing his future in his attacks on the powers that be. Undoubtedly now she would be convinced, as some of his friends had already endeavored to convince her, that, after all, he was a fanatic, an impractical dreamer, who could not accomplish his ambition to right what he believed to be great wrongs, who could not, moreover, escape summary dismissal from his paper. But he must go on. He would go on. He would go that very night to a newspaper that would not suppress nor qualify the truth, one that would not distort facts nor misrepresent a situation in order to deceive the public, to which it was its duty to give the truth. Yes, and he would show the big thieves of the city that even if they managed to remain superior to the law at least they could not remain superior to public opinion. The time had come when—

"Wheeler Brand! Wheeler Brand!" The voice of Nolan came to his ears above the ticking of the telegraph instruments and the clicking of typewriter keys. Brand started from his seat. He did not recognize the voice, nor did any one else in the smoky city room, as curious upraised faces around him testified. It came from the managing editor's room, however, so he hastened to respond, wondering what it could mean.

Brand entered McHenry's office and faced the three men, his surprise increasing as he saw from the attitudes of McHenry and Dupuy that a huge, rawboned, bronzed faced stranger apparently dominated the situation.

"Yes," said Brand inquiringly to the stranger, whom he placed as the owner of the voice, because he knew it had not been McHenry's or Dupuy's.

"I am Nolan, the new owner," greeted the stranger.

Brand stepped forward and offered his hand, which Nolan grasped.

"How do you do, Mr. Nolan?" the reporter greeted him, endeavoring to figure just what the mysterious proceeding portended.

Nolan went straight to the point.

"From now on you sit here."

he caused the blood to rush almost blindly into the head of the young reporter when he swung around, grasped Brand's arm, drew him over to the managing editor's chair, beside which that official was standing, and said, "Well, I've got another job for you." Nolan put both hands on Brand's shoulders and by main strength forced him down heavily into the chair. "From now on you sit here," he announced. "You're managing editor now."

CHAPTER V.
A YEAR passed since the eventful night for Wheeler Brand when Nolan made him managing editor of the Advance. In these months Brand made a showing with the paper that was never dreamed of by the owners preceding as being within the range of possibility. Made absolute master of the paper and consequently dictator of its policy, the young man set a pace that the paper's rivals found difficult to equal, much less to outstrip. His exposure of the scandals in the exclusive world of high life insurance finance has thus far proved the most vital reform of his administration. As a result of this crusade, which drove a half dozen leading officials from almost as many companies, the president of the United States stated publicly that "the vast life insurance business of this country is now on the soundest financial basis it has ever had."

But Wheeler Brand in the press of stirring events had not forgotten Judge Bartelmy. In fact, certain activities of that estimable individual were just now under close scrutiny by the one time reporter, who, if he could be prevailed on to speak concerning it, might possibly observe that the judge was very soon to have an opportunity to make a few explanations which would be received with undoubted interest by the public. The young editor's suit for the hand of Judith Bartelmy might be said, since we are dealing with a judge's family, to be in statu quo. She was still waiting for him "to become sane," as she had expressed herself to him. A girl of lofty principles and of decided strength of character, she could not see his duty from her viewpoint. Perhaps it was all quite natural, quite womanly, quite daughterly, that she should subscribe absolutely to her father's side in the momentous case of "JUDGE BARTELMEY VERSUS THE PEOPLE, WHEELER BRAND AND THE ADVANCE."

She was loyal to her father, and she was trying to be loyal to her lover, and the task was becoming more and more difficult. Yet she waited, and Wheeler Brand waited, and each prayed that the other would end the ordeal and heal two breaking hearts.

Today we find Wheeler Brand proceeding toward the luxurious Nolan home on a fashionable residential thoroughfare to visit the proprietor of the paper to hand him a statement of the Advance's progress, to discuss matters of editorial policy and to confer regarding a certain development concerning Judge Bartelmy.

At the Nolan home a reception had been announced, hundreds of invitations sent out, but the responses did not encourage Mrs. Nolan in her social aspirations. Society passed her by. That was the whole story in brief. Society, as usual, was ever so much pleased with itself and was too busy to include Mrs. Nolan, Phyllis and Sylvester in its diversions. The husband and father cared very little for society, had no time for it, but he fondly loved the courageous, warm hearted woman who had uncompromisingly shared with him the onerous hardships of his early days, and it was his desire to gratify her ambitions as well as those of his daughter. The fortune he had plucked from Nevada's flinty bosom enabled him to be generous, and he smiled approvingly on every new extravagance of Mrs. Michael Nolan. Therefore if she was socially ambitious she must have her way and be allowed to carry on her campaign for recognition in whatever fashion she chose. Certainly the home he had established was a fitting vantage ground from which to wage a war of dollars against the prehistoric embattlements with which the city's Four Hundred had encircled its camp. Palatial in size, the Nolan residence was equally palatial in its furnishings, and only the magic word from the magic lips of a single member of the magic realm of "the aristocracy" was necessary to send monogrammed coaches in long lines to the Nolan doors, to fill the costly rooms with distinguished faces, to fill to overflowing with happiness the yearning heart of Mrs. Michael Nolan.

But the word had not yet been spoken.
It was now late in the afternoon at the Nolan home. Phyllis walked across the drawing room, irritation plainly marking her pretty pink and white face. The music of a string orchestra stationed in the conservatory ceased. She addressed a servant who stood at attention at a door at the right which led to the dining room.

"Pitcher," she said discouragedly, "I don't think any one else will come, so tell the musicians they can go."

"Yes, Miss Phyllis."
At this point Mrs. Nolan came storming in, carrying a huge bunch of hot-house grapes in her hand.

"Pitcher, I noticed those caterer men are drinking all the champagne, and I want it stopped," she ordered loudly.

Pitcher bowed and went out.
"If our guests won't come here to drink it, at least we will drink it ourselves," Mrs. Nolan announced to Phyllis.

"Well, we have done it—sent out 400 cards, and who's been here that anybody wants to see? This is the second time we've gone to all this trouble and expense for nothing and nobody, and if you'll take my advice it will be the last."

"Mamma, Pitcher will hear," the girl protested.

The mother bit a grape from the bunch. She deposited the skin and stones in a Sevres vase on the marble mantel.

"Phyllis, what did you have to pay that musician?" she asked.

"Well, his price is a thousand dollars."

"Good gracious!"
"But I got him for $750. I promised the Advance would help him."

"Seven fifty for playing twice. I'd rather hear the band," Mrs. Nolan bit off another grape.

"You don't understand, mamma. Everybody's wild over that violinist."

"It seems there wasn't nobody wild enough to come here."

"There wasn't anybody," spoke Phyllis, correcting her mother.

"Well, was there?" retorted the mother as she dropped the grape skin in another vase.

"Oh, dear," Phyllis wailed disconsolately as she seated herself before a small stand, "don't rub it in, mamma! I can't help it."

"Now, who's blaming you, child?" consoled the mother. "There, don't cry. I'm not so disappointed about myself, but I can't bear to see you snubbed right and left. You are good enough to go with any of these people, and you shall too. It's that newspaper that's at the bottom of it. People won't have it, or us because of it, and I mean to tell your father so too. And that's why these 'at homes' is no good."

"Are no good, mamma," tearfully.
"Well, are they? It would have been better to put your $750 into suffragette. That's what gets you in with the right people—not that I care to go, but I don't want the men to say I can't."

Sylvester Nolan interrupted the conversation between mother and daughter by appearing before them with his bosom friend, Max Powell, who believed himself to have the makings of a master poet. It was with deepest pride that the Nolan son presented Powell, long haired, snail-faced and sedately dressed, to his mother and sister. Snail-faced? Indeed, his countenance had that sickly greenish yellow hue that comes from long de-voicing of the muses and long abstinence from the devouring of food.

"Hello, mamma!" he cried enthusiastically. "Here's a friend of mine I want you to know—Mr. Powell, the poet."

"How do you do, Mr. Powell? You look as if it would be easy for you to write poetry. Do you know, poetry just sets me wild!"

Sylvester parted Powell on the back.

"Well, this lad's going to make a big noise in poetry some day. You must have heard of Powell. My sister, old man!"

"Won't you have a cup of tea, Mr. Powell?" invited Mrs. Nolan, visibly impressed by the presence of a poet at her home.

Powell started confusedly to utter his thanks. He did not seem over-joyed at the offer.

Sylvester saw the difficulty. "Tea," he exclaimed. "Abstain for Powell!"

Mrs. Nolan expressed her regret at not having any abstinence and left the room, followed by Phyllis, to arrange for something for Powell to eat. "Poor fellow! He looks hungry," she whispered to Phyllis.

Sylvester caught the poet by the arm.

"One minute, Powow," he cautioned. "Be sure you don't mention anything to the folks about my little actress friend. I don't want them to know that I am going to take a crack at uplifting the stage. The little girl will be all right. She'll just make your libretto hum. She'll fill it with personality. Build up all those weak places. You know, Powow, there are some. Where's that poem for her? Finished yet?"

"Yes, it's here somewhere," fumbling in a pocket.

"Have you made it amorous for the little girl?"

"Judge for yourself. Of course I tried to write in your vein as well as I could, so that there would be no doubt to the authorship."

Sylvester read the lines:

Oh, Guevereire, how sweet my dear!
My spirit soars in dreams denied,
Worlds beyond worlds with thee, my bride—

"I don't like that much," he announced when he had finished.

"Bride! Is it necessary to put that in writing? Besides, it doesn't sound as if I wrote it. Now, does it, Powow, old chap? Fess up."

"I hope it doesn't sound as if I wrote it."

"I thought you'd see it. Now, change that and it's a knockout drop. Can't you change it now? And I'll send it to the little girl tonight on a bed of orchids. Make it something beginning with 'ruby lips'—you know the sort of guff—and then here and there 'eyes like night, full of delight, something on that order.'"

Powell sat and wrote for a few minutes. "Here," he finally said, "I've changed it."

Sylvester glanced over the shoulder of the rising young genius, who read aloud these inspiring words:

So bright and beaming are thine eyes
The very stars twinkle in surprise
Thy hair so like the dusky night,
Thy kiss so vibrant with delight,
I thrill unto my finger tips.
Oh, ruby, ruby—rougey lips!

Powell literally writhed in agony as he listened to the doggerel.

"It's great!" cried Sylvester ecstatically. "And now come get your tea."

Gee, I'd like to take a crack at being a poet!"

The two conspirators hurried into the dining room as Wheeler Brand and the owner of the Advance came into the drawing room.

"You're right, Wheeler; you're right," Nolan was saying. "This is a better showing than I hoped for. Look in your stocking next Christmas. There'll be something for you. When I got into the newspaper business, Brand, they told me it was the beginning of my finish, that it sucked ten fortunes down for every one it built and no middle aged man ever went into it and came out again without teeth marks all over him. But look at that! He held up a typewritten statement. 'I'm richer for going in twice as much advertising as last year at this time.'"

Nolan seated himself on a settee.

"The big advertisers never pull their ads, so long as they are getting returns from them," put in Brand.

"Look at Dupuy. Remember how he threatened us and how his clients took their ads, out for two months?"

"Yes, but they put them back again."

"Why? Because they need more than we need them," Brand laughed.

"Well, he's got something else up his sleeve now," remarked Nolan. "He telephoned that he would come to see me this afternoon."

"Are you going to see him?" Brand asked curiously.

"I thought I might as well. He'll be here. Maybe he wants to fire you again." The newspaper owner looked up at Brand and laughed heartily.

Mrs. Nolan and Phyllis re-entered the drawing room, and Brand became the especial object of their attentions.

The mother desired to have him print the list of her invited guests who had never attended the reception. Phyllis requested him to print a story about the violinist and was vastly annoyed when Brand informed her that the subject was a matter for the musical editor to attend to.

"And there's something else, Mr. Brand," A look of despair came into Brand's face. "Phyllis went to Miss Bartelmy's musicale the other day, and you didn't even include her name among those present," the mother said.

"Why, I'm sorry. That was an oversight. I assure you, I suppose they made up the usual list in the office."

"I hope it won't happen again," remarked Phyllis indignantly.

"Yes, and the way it's handling this Loris divorce case is all wrong," snapped Mrs. Nolan. "I know Mrs. Loris. She is no better than she should be, and people who live in icehouses shouldn't throw hot water."

"We have no policy in the Loris

"People who live in icehouses shouldn't throw hot water."

case," remarked Brand in defense.

"We merely print the facts."
"Facts?" Mrs. Nolan cried. "That paper upsets me for the whole day every morning."

"There now, mother; I guess the paper's all right," ventured Nolan soothingly.

"You've got another guess, Michael. Nobody reads it but shopgirls, who spend a penny for the Advance and another for a stick of gum and hang on to a strap with one hand and the Advance with the other while they're wagging their jaws all the way down to work. That's all that reads it!"

She paused for breath, then went on, "And I must say I think it's scandalous the way you attack Judge Bartelmy every little while."

"Yes," contributed Phyllis, "and his daughter's one of the most exclusive and sought after girls in New York. She's the only one of her set who has been at all nice to me. Isn't that so, mamma?"

"Yes, and why the paper should go for her father just as it does for every other prominent man in town I can't see. She must think it's very funny that such things should appear in the Advance after what she's done for us."

"Oh," suggested Brand, thinking to soothe his employer's wife, "she probably knows that you have absolutely nothing to do with the policy of the Advance."

"Is that so?" ejaculated Mrs. Nolan, indignantly. "They certainly are very kind hearted people to act the way they do in the face of that paper."

"Judge Bartelmy is first and last a politician," explained Brand.

Michael Nolan bent forward intently. The conversation had now reached a point where he realized an issue of vital importance to himself and to the Advance had been touched on.

"Well, I suppose he has been meddling up to us a little," he began, then paused.

Brand drew a deep breath, stood up erect in the middle of the drawing room and daringly explained the situation to the owner of the paper.

"Bartelmy handles people better than any man in town," he declared. "He has studied the Advance, dissected its position and—I will be frank with you—discovered its weaknesses. He knows he can't reach you through your emptiness or political ambition because you lack those qualities. He now realizes that his only hope of influencing us lies in an appeal to—"

He hesitated.
"Well," asked Mrs. Nolan ominously, "Brand found the courage to complete the sentence."

"His only hope lies in an appeal—to your family's social desires"—Phyllis rose from her seat, her cheeks red with anger—"and that's the only reason he has for taking you up."

Mrs. Nolan gave a scream of wrath. Nolan himself, regretting that the unpleasant scene had occurred, rose from the settee and advanced to calm the ruffled waters, but his face was clouded. His serious expression indicated that he was deeply concerned over the frank statements of his managing editor, and one could instinctively feel that he was convinced that Brand had spoken the truth.

CHAPTER VI.
Nolan faced Brand.

"Come, come, Wheeler," he said. "Let's drop the subject now."

"Mr. Brand, you are forgetting your place," contributed Phyllis.

"Michael," insisted Mrs. Nolan, "are you going to let this young man ruin the whole of us? I, for one, am glad Judge Bartelmy has taken us up, and if it wasn't for the way Mr. Brand runs wild with that paper—her voice broke—"others might." She crossed to the door at the left. "Here we've squandered money right and left and nobody would have anything to do with us. I declare I was happier poor. At least when I asked anybody to eat then they came. Look at that table in there—she pointed—"groaning with good things to eat, and there's $100 for hot-house grapes, and nobody's touched 'em!" She picked up a bunch of grapes from a stand and began to eat them.

"Mother," laughed the husband good naturedly. "I've seen you get away with three bunches all by yourself."

"Well, I felt it was my duty not to let them go to waste." She burst into tears. "Come on, Phyllis," she managed to say, and the heartbroken mother and daughter went from the room.

"You mustn't mind what mother says," Nolan said to Brand. "She's been kind of lonely since she came back to New York."

The editor's heart swelled with sympathy for the woman whose ambitions for herself and her daughter had caused the bitterest pain that injured pride can give. He saw that it would be difficult for her to learn that social position in a big city can be won only by skillful maneuvering, the ability to do which Mrs. Nolan apparently did not possess.

"Oh, I understand!" he answered feelingly.

Brand and Nolan went into the library to smoke. Hardly had they disappeared when Pitcher entered the drawing room as an escort for Judge Bartelmy and his daughter Judith. Brand had not erred a few minutes previous when in the same room he had pronounced the judge to be the best "handler of people" in the city. The conversation which ensued between the jurist and his daughter as they awaited their hostess well illustrated his reasons for accepting, with his daughter, Mrs. Nolan's invitation. When Pitcher had gone in search of Mrs. Nolan it was the girl who first spoke.

"Father," she said, "I want you to know that I've been to five teas this afternoon. I'm doing you a great favor to come to this one."

"Yes, my dear; I appreciate it, but social duties!"

The girl laughed shortly.

"Now, this doesn't come under the head of social duties."

"Oh, yes," the judge answered quickly, "if you view society in its broader sense. Beyond your little world is a larger one where caste is of small consequence and where all men should be of service to each other."

"But the Nolans—they certainly haven't been of service to you!" questioned the girl.

He glanced sharply at Judith.

"But I wish them to be, and we're getting on—we're getting on."

"Their paper keeps going for you just as much as ever, father. I don't suppose one ought to mind it, but I do."

"Judith, Nolans have lived a every age in every country," pronounced the jurist. "He's a composite of anarchist and autocrat. Eventually the autocrat in him will triumph. Just now he's hounding old institutions. I, for instance, represent to him the judiciary, and he attacks me. No consequence whatever, but I'm here in defense of the United States bench. My cause is the cause of my colleagues. I tell you, Judith, I know the breed, I know how to get the venom out of his fangs. Diplomacy, my dear—diplomacy!"

Judith became enthusiastic.

"Father, I believe you would have been a great prime minister in the old days."

The judge straightened up, smiling pleasantly at his daughter's complimentary estimate of him. "Hardly that, hardly that," he protested. He became reflective. "They were feeble old men, for a thousand years courtiously moving kings and their armies like pawns on a chessboard. They were always very tactful, Judith, those princes of the past."

"Oh," she admitted, "you never fail to illustrate your point, whatever it is."

"Just imagine," said her father, "what one of those old fellows would do in this case."

"Yes, I suppose you're right, and in the end you'll make these people see how wrong they've been about you."

"Oh, yes!" he went on confidently. "As they become accustomed to their prosperity you will find that the demagogism of their paper will be modified and ultimately vanish." He seated himself near his daughter.

"That would be a terrible blow for Wheeler, wouldn't it?" she suddenly asked.

"Wheeler! Oh, Wheeler! He's an entirely different type—the idealist, the fanatical idealist. I'm sorry. I always liked the boy. His heart's all right, but his head's all wrong, and I hope he's merely passing through a phase."

"I don't think you quite understand Wheeler, father," responded Judith, rising.

He took hold of the girl's hands.

Yandell-Gugenheim Company

CRITLEDEN RECORD-PRESS.

N. E. CALMES, Editor and Publisher.

Entered as second-class matter February 9th, 1907 at the post-office at Marion, Kentucky, under the act of Congress, of March 3rd 1879.

The Kentucky Flour Spar Company of Marion, shipped 108 cars of flour during the past month and this company is but one of several equally as prosperous.

o o o

One of the leading grocery merchants of the best town in the richest grain county in the state, said to us the other day, that the reason the Marion Milling Company put out the best flour on the market, was because Crittenden county produced the highest grade of wheat on the market. Coming as it did from a man who sells more flour than any other man in his county, it is the more a compliment, to our wheat growers as well as to our popular mill Manager, Mr. R. I. Nunn.

We were unable to attend the two protracted meetings just closed, but to all the great soul-saving sermons we heard, in not one of them was the man passing his goods over the counter on the Sabbath reproved. There was a day that such things were called violations against the moral law and a sin against God's law. Have these laws been changed? If so we are sorry, for surely the laws that protected our Sabbath were the best laws and the days in which our Sabbaths were respected the best days.

o o o

Rev. Aubrey Barbee is preaching some powerful sermons from the pulpit of the C. P. Church resulting in God making himself manifest on Tuesday night in the happy conversion of five souls, all men. It was a happy, glorious service filling the whole house with God's presence. Rev. Barbee is a great and good man from whose sermon great good is being accomplished. He now has the devil on the run and were he refused a hiding place by every citizen of Marion, would soon be forced within the realm prepared for him and his angels.

One of the most flagrant insults to the tobacco grower coming to our attention is the effort upon the part of a few speculators to attempt to buy the 1908 warehouse receipts of the Association members for sixty cents on the dollar, when the simple fact that these men want to buy them shows conclusively that they are worth more or they would not have made the attempt. The truth is these receipts that the hard working farmer toiled sixteen months in the year to hold is worth just as much to him as it is to the speculator. There is something dead up the creek when the buzzards begin to circle, and the sooner it is found, the better. It is evident to us that an enemy hath done this for a blow at the Association as well as to satisfy their desire for gain even though it brings the oppressed next door to starvation. Hold your hard-earned receipts farmers and you will soon find the source and origin of this attempt to profit at your expense.

Over the phone Monday Mr. J. N. Banks of Henderson, authorized us to say to the Crittenden people, that he thought it a shame that such an attempt was being made, and that the members of the Association were more likely to receive a premium on their receipts than they were to be forced to take sixty cents on the dollar.

Mr. T. J. Yandell, Cashier of the Marion Bank, on being interviewed Tuesday, said: "I think every warehouse receipt will eventually be paid in full. I regard President Elliott as an honest, trustworthy gentleman, and am satisfied he will give the farmers who have entrusted him with their tobacco, a fair deal." No, our Bank has never bought any of these receipts, but on the contrary, have always advised the farmers to hold them. They certainly deserve all there is coming.

Eggs are now selling at from 45 to 50 cents a dozen, say at an average of 4 cents a piece. In Eastern cities the price is still higher. The Wall Street Journal a few days ago printed some interesting statistics which seem to conflict. Though one authority estimates the average production of a hen at two hundred eggs a year, the Journal adopts "the very conservative figure of 120 eggs a hen per annum," and says:

On the above basis of production there are 150,000,000 laying hens in the United States responsible for the production of 18,000,000,000 eggs."

As we said a few days ago in regard to another remarkable and prodigious display of native resources that is going some. If these figures are right there are in the country two hundred eggs each year for each man, woman or child; surely no niggardly allowance. As many people have never acquired the egg-for-breakfast habit, and as babies do not figure as large egg consumers, it is fair to say that the supply of eggs would average one per capita per diem. Certainly 18,000,000,000 eggs ought to supply every just demand at a fair price.

But we have other interesting figures from the Wall Street Journal. On the basis of a farm price of 20 cents a dozen it calculates that the net yearly profit on each hen is $1.50. Capitalizing the industry on a 5 per cent basis, the value of each hen would be $30. The total investment in hens would therefore amount to $4,500,000,000. On this tremendous sum the hens of America earn 5 per cent., or $225,000,000 a year.

It is somewhat surprising that this wonderful industry has never appeared to Mr. Morgan. For it has its artistic as well as commercial side. It ought not to be difficult to organize a great hen syndicate which should increase efficiency, introduce economy of management, cheaper production—and raise prices. Those control the hens and cattle of the country may well be indifferent to those who make its laws.

Former Adjutant-General H. R. Lawrence, editor of the Cadiz Record, prints an editorial in a recent issue of his paper, warning the Democracy of the State that "factional troubles" may be the cause of Democratic defeat in the next State election. The Record editorial was reproduced in the Kentucky State Journal, of which paper Ex-Governor J. C. W. Beckham is editor. Among other things Gen. Lawrence says:

"The Democrats have large majorities in both houses of the Legislature, and there are already signs of factional trouble over the selection of the next state ticket. All such things are calculated to breed dissension and party strife, and unless the situation is watched by cool and conservative heads, and a proper calculation of results is made at every step taken, the winning of a glorious victory last November may be followed by an overwhelming defeat two years later."

Just why former Gov. Beckham reproduced this editorial we are at a loss to understand. He is the only man in Kentucky, outside the Republican party, who is doing anything to breed dissension. He seldom allows an issue of his paper to go to press without some sort of misrepresentation against Congressman Ben Johnson, who, it is practically conceded, will be the Democratic nominee for Governor. Gen. Lawrence's editorial is a rebuke to the former Governor, and to no one else.

The editor of the Messenger most sincerely hopes Gen. Lawrence will "watch" his friend and former chief, Gov. Beckham, and, if possible, direct his footsteps to Democratic pastures, where stalwart Democrats like Ben Johnson are devoting their time and attention to the upbuilding of the party in Kentucky. The Democratic party has been more than kind to Mr. Beckham—it has been his benefactor.

Last year when the former Governor bolted the Louisville municipal and Jefferson county Democratic ticket his action was a source of regret to the Democrats of Kentucky who had repeatedly supported him. It is recalled that his paper, the State Journal, printed quite a number of editorials that bitterly assailed that ticket of good Democrats, and those editorials were given wider publicity by being reproduced in the Louisville Evening Post. In fact, there are many people who believe they were written expressly for the purpose of reproduction in the Post.

It was hoped that after Gov. Beckham's escapade of last year he would see the error of his way, and again cast his lot with the Democratic party to which he owes so much. But we now find him busily engaged in fighting Congressman Ben Johnson, who, barring a revolution in Kentucky politics, will be the party's standard bearer for Governor. Is the former Governor's coalition with the Republicans to be permanent? We hope not; if for no other reason than to dish away from the ormes of Gratitude the crimson of Ingratitude.—Meade County Messenger.

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes

By virtue of taxes due the State and County for the year 1909, I or one of my Deputies will on Monday the 14th day of February, 1910, between the hours of 1 o'clock p. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., at the court house door in Marion, Crittenden county, Kentucky, expose to Public Sale to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of the taxes due aforesaid and costs) to wit:

POULTRY FAIR.

The Editor of the Record-Press has conceived the idea of a poultry show to be held some time not later than March and has headed the subscription list with $5 00 in cash that the premiums for best strains may reach as high as $20 00. He has talked the matter over with the business men of the town, all of whom have expressed themselves well pleased with the idea of a two or three days poultry fair. The thing now to be found out is: How many breeds or strains will compete for prizes, so we may know how to divide the premiums. With this end in view we are going to ask every poultry raiser that feels disposed to cage his birds and compete for a prize to see us at once or write us. We are in dead earnest about it and the names of all so liberally contributing to swell the premium list will appear in next week's issue of the Record-Press. Surely if we are trying to help you in securing a premium for raising the best breed of chickens, turkeys, geese or ducks you can trouble yourself to at once come to town or write us the name of the strain you mean to enter. All adjoining counties will be allowed to contest, but a committee will have charge of the classifying which will appear next week.

The question is now, are you ready for the show. We have already been notified by four different prominent raisers from Union county that they will be on hand with several strains each. Give this your attention at once.

MA'S NEW HUSBAND.

Do you want to see the funniest lesson ever given a boy by his teacher? Do you want to see the most old-fashioned and cunning boy that ever took a lesson from a teacher? Then do not fail to see the performance of "Ma's New Husband" at the Opera House on Thursday night, Feb. 10th, the only chance that will be offered to see it in this city. At first sight these questions may seem irrelevant, but when you are let into the secret that the boy in question is really a full grown man in boy's clothes, you will begin to see the humorous side of the scene. The bout between these two are brimful of mirth and they form only a small portion of the ludicrous happenings that occur during the performance of this entertaining musical farce. Other cities highly praise the members of the company provided by the Harry Scott Company in the various characters. Seat sale will open at morning.

Marion, Ky., Jan. 31, 1910.
Dear Mr. Calmes:

It is with much pleasure that we notice the article in your last issue giving the prices that some of our leading farmers are receiving for their tobacco in the Stemming Association. This should be gratifying to all true men, let their calling or profession be what it may, when they call to mind the prices received for this same grade of tobacco a few years since.

Now, Mr. Editor, we are not "steering up stumps" down here at our little Farmer's Union Tobacco House, but, to show you that we are alive and doing something, we give the names of some of our members and the prices received for their tobacco, which we think will compare favorably with those of the Stemming people.

We could give more but we think this will prove to any doubting mind that the F. E. & C. U. of A. is anything but a "dead dog."

We have received some 300,000 pounds of pooled tobacco, and we think about half of the crop is yet to come.

Before we close we should like to whisper a word or two to our boys who have not delivered. Please deliver your tobacco as soon as you can and in good order. First call all the trash from the lugs, and all the lugs from the leaf, and then be sure that your tobacco is not in damaging condition from excessive moisture.

We notice that all who do this, deliver their crop without any trouble whatever. Some people seem to think that it is money to them to leave trash in the lugs and leaf, men, your crop will bring you more money if every grade is kept to itself. By leaving a perceptible amount of trash with the other grades you cut the price from one to three cents per pound.

The owner of the tobacco can "corner" his crop ready for delivery for much less than the receiver can do so, and also for less than the "dock" that the farmer sustains by delivering his tobacco soft.

Now, Mr. Editor, if this escapes that hideous receptacle, the waste basket, we may trouble you with another effort soon. Wishing the dear old Record-Press success, I am

Yours forever,

Uitch.

Pain in Heart

For two years I had pain in my heart, back and left side. Could not draw a deep breath on left side, and any little exertion would cause palpitation. Under advice I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nerve. I took about thirteen bottles, am in better health than I ever was, and have gained 14 pounds."

MRS. LILLIE THOMAS,
Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

For many years Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been very successful in the treatment of heart troubles, because of its tonic effect upon the heart nerves and muscles. Even in severe cases of long standing it has frequently prolonged life for many years after doctors had given up all hope, as proven by thousands of letters we have received from grateful people.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return your money.

HOW TO TELL A FRESH EGG

Dr. Wil-y Communicates the Secret to Congressmen.

Washington, Jan. 27.—It is easily possible to tell the difference between a fresh egg and a cold storage egg without breaking the shell, and dealers in the district of Columbia who sell stored eggs for "strictly fresh" ones may be prosecuted and convicted, according to statements today of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government's chief chemist, at the "high cost of living" hearing being conducted by a house sub-committee.

Dr. Wiley brought with him a large number of fresh and also some of the cold storage variety. Dropping them into a large vessel of water containing 10 per cent salt solution, the fresh eggs immediately sank to the bottom and the refrigerated ones floated on the surface. When asked how he knew the eggs were fresh, Dr. Wiley replied that one of his inspectors had watched the hens lay them yesterday.

Why does Great Britain buy its oatmeal of us?

Certainly it seems like carrying coals to Newcastle to speak of exporting oatmeal to Scotland and yet, every year the Quaker Oats Company sends hundreds of thousands of cases of Quaker Oats to Great Britain and Europe.

The reason is simple; while the English and Scotch have for centuries eaten oatmeal in quantities and with a regularity that has made them the most rugged physically, and active mentally of all people, the American has been eating oatmeal and trying all the time to improve the methods of manufacture so that he might get that desirable foreign trade.

How well he has succeeded would be seen at a glance at the export reports on Quaker Oats. This brand is without a rival; it is packed in regular 10c packages, and in hermetically sealed tins for hot climates.

A LETTER FROM A SOLDIER.

Editor Record-Press:—

With your permission I would like to say a few words.

I subscribed for your paper some time ago. I got my first copy today and it was like getting a letter from home to lay my eyes on your paper, as it was the first one I had seen in a long time. I was pleased to hear that everything was moving along so nice in old Kentucky. I have been in the U. S. cavalry a little over eighteen months. I like the army all O. K. But I had rather be in Old Kentucky than to be in Kansas.

They call Kansas the sunflower state, but I have another name for it I call it the big foot state for the people have feet like shoe boxes. If any of you boys ever does take on in the army, don't enlist for any post in Kansas.

Editor, I see you have made quite a mistake in my name, you have it Stallions instead of Shadouns. I would be pleased to have it changed. I see that the A. S. E. is still doing good, let us hope that she will keep up her good work in the future.

There is four troops of the 15th cavalry here and there is one hundred men to the troop and we all know each other like school mates. We have some good old times, but it is not as funny as some people might think ride post in a foot of snow these cold nights. Well as it is time for us to go and tie in our horses I will close and if this is published I will come again sometime in the future. Wishing you all good luck.

Yours truly,
Erwin Shadouns.

Dear Mr. Calmes:—I send you one dollar for the Record-Press for the year 1910. It comes to me like a letter from home. I have been in Wyoming since last June and will say, I like it better than any part of West I have seen. There is lots of room for more people.

Wyoming not having as many people as the city of Denver, Colorado. It gets very cold here having the present winter registered as low as 50 below zero. I am now cooking on a dining car on the Laramie Plains Line on a run across the Rockies, reaching at altitude of 11,000 feet with the snow about 7 feet deep. Wishing you and all Crittenden county people a prosperous year, I remain

Liver Trouble Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and surest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great liver laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will start the flow of gastric juices, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1.00, and in many cases a single bottle has cured a chronic case.

For example, John W. Lee, 619 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a stubborn and very long-standing case of liver trouble, with pimples, blotches, jaundice, etc., and it cured him. Mrs. B. Flincham, Jackson, Ky., says the same of it. Thousands of families keep it in the house against just such an emergency, as you can never tell when some member of the family will need a good laxative.

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver make a test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free test bottle if you will send your name and address. The sample will show you how pleasant it is to take, how quickly it works. It will start you on the cure of your trouble and convince you that you have found a cure. That is the object of the sample, and the doctor urges you to send for it today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

SOME BANKERS IDEAS OF OUR FINANCIAL CONDITION.

In the history of Crittenden county the future for the farmers and the business men looks brighter than ever before and surely my interview with Mr. T. J. Yandell, cashier of the Marion Bank gives me reasonable grounds for this expression of my opinion. The business and industrial outlook, in fact is better than it has been in the history of his bank and with the price of flour spar up, with an increased demand and preparations being made for a greater output than ever before, with prices on hogs, cattle, corn, wheat, hay and tobacco soaring skyward and depositors with $175,600.98 in this bank, which is but one of three prosperous institutions of the county, is the best evidence of the reign of prosperity not being enjoyed by the farmers and business men of the county.

The people of this county have awakened to a realization of better things and higher aims, and while it is true our lands as a whole are not as rich for corn and wheat as some of the other counties within the borders of this great commonwealth their eyes are open to the fact that we are being recognized as producing a high grade of horses, mules, cattle, sheep and tobacco and the richest in flour spar of any county in the United States. Statistics bears out in this latter assertion. Truly the farmers and people generally, are paying more special attention to the swelling of their bank account than ever before, partially due to the cash system put on foot by many of our retail merchants. With the spirit of thrift and peaceful rivalry now so noticeable we feel safe in saying that the people of Crittenden county are enjoying the most prosperous time in its history. In proof of all this the merchants of Marion enjoyed the best trade and deposited more money during the holidays than in any previous year.

From this interview with Mr. Yandell, who is one of the clearest and most courteous gentlemen it has been our pleasure to meet, we are glad to know that he feels that the farmers have by the prevailing high prices, been lifted up and are standing now as the house built upon a rock.

KENTUCKY. DANVILLE.

J. A. Quisenberry, cashier of the Citizens' National Bank, Danville, Ky.:

"The financial condition of the farmers of this section is better than it has ever before been. High price of tobacco and farm products and live-stock have put them in fine fix. On January 1, 1910, there was on deposit in the five banks in this county $1,245,691.46, and of this amount there was on that date in the three banks in this city $1,095,691.46. This is the largest deposits the banks has ever had in their entire history. As a result, the farmers are less in debt than ever before, and their financial condition, as a rule, is good.

"The general business and industrial outlook is good, especially if we can get some legislation through our present Legislature upon the matter of methods of taxation, whereby capital will be invited to come into our State, instead of being driven out, as it has been for some years past. The surplus money from the crops will be invested in other lands, stock and improvements, partially, and some of it will doubtless go into questionable investments. This section of our State is almost entirely agricultural, and too little of a manufacturing section, consequently we do not have that avenue for investment of capital.

"Lands in this section have advanced a good deal, say perhaps 15 per cent, in the past year. We have a steady demand for good lands, but the buyers, as a rule, are not from the outside of the State, but come from our mountain sections, where they have sold mineral lands and want to invest in better farming lands than the mountains afford. In the past 18 months we have had a considerable increase in our population, largely due to the fact that the C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., (now operated by the Southern Railway) has made this city an end of its first division out of Cincinnati, and the further fact that this community has this year developed into quite a large loose-leaf tobacco market. This has stimulated the growth of tobacco, and we look for about 100 per cent. increase in the acreage for the coming season of 1910."

CLINTON.

C. V. Heaslet, cashier of the First National Bank at Clinton, Ky.:

"An intimate connection during the past eight years I have been in the banking business in this (Hickman) county leads me to say that the financial conditions are very much better at the beginning of this year than at any time for the past eight years in this, a truly agricultural county. There has been made just a beginning of the intensive methods of farming, and the idea is spreading and spreading as the success of it is noted by the surrounding neighbors. Crop rotation is being more carefully and systematically done, and grain crops are being used for feeding livestock upon the lands, producing the grain to an extent never known before.

"Again, in the retail business done by merchants the cash system is rapidly being adopted, and is a very potent factor in preventing the purchase of articles not necessary, and is causing the people to take reasonable care of machinery that formerly was left in the open weather when crops were harvested, as frequently, under former conditions, the owner of this or that piece of machinery would be struggling to pay notes executed for the purchase price long after the machine had been thrown in the scrap heap.

"Our people are more generally doing a banking business than in the year past, and there is an independence and satisfaction felt by a man with money in the bank not known to the individual without it.

"The price of farming lands has advanced a good deal, say perhaps 15 per cent, in the past year. We have a steady demand for good lands, but the buyers, as a rule, are not from the outside of the State, but come from our mountain sections, where they have sold mineral lands and want to invest in better farming lands than the mountains afford. In the past 18 months we have had a considerable increase in our population, largely due to the fact that the C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., (now operated by the Southern Railway) has made this city an end of its prices than in their former homes, and in that way have assisted in bringing in advanced methods of agriculture as practiced in sections of high-priced lands.

"There is a spirit of optimism prevailing here, and the dawn of still greater activity and prosperity is breaking. Education of the youth to promote higher standards will fit them for that better appreciation of the natural resources and advantages so lavishly distributed over this western portion of Kentucky, widely known as the 'Penny-rile' district of Kentucky."
